Play Pipe Gas To East Cities

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Amid drastic moves by the U.S. government to tightening oil and shortages, President Truman headed from Florida Saturday to resume personal command of his "finest fight" with John L. Lewis. Meanwhile it was reported that big oil and gas pipelines, warlike co-operators of oil, may be put to work carrying natural gas from Texas to the east for the emergency fuel.

A dispute—overed to be unnecessary use of electricity—even Christmas tree lighting—in 21 states and the District of Columbia as attorneys for the department of justice and the United Mine Workers prepared their arguments for the court contents proceedings Monday which might put Lewis in jail.

The government contends Lewis is in contempt of Judge Goldsborough, who ordered him to call off his contract "termination" which led 400,000 workers to leave the 3,300 government-held mines. Lewis has said nothing since the injunction was issued Monday.

Mr. Truman was due back in Washington by mid-afternoon along with his chief cabinet officer, Reconstruction Director John R. Brown.

Car, Truck Fall In River Crossing

GRANDE PRAIRIE—Drivers of car and truck suspended

drowning when the vehicles in which they were riding crashed through the ice recently on the Smoky river at Mud Creek crossing.

The car, a sedan, was proceeding east over the ice when it gave way. The truck was jumped by the car. It is likely it will remain there for some time.

The truck, with four persons returned men in the cab, drove through the ice at a point where the water was lower. The truck was in about two to three feet of water.

Each fall and spring there is the same delay and inconvenience at Mud Creek crossing when the ferry is unable to operate. Sometimes the road is closed for two weeks at a time.

As this is the only crossing of the Smoky from Edmonton to the Alberta highway traffic is held up all along the route. The Canadian Coachways bus can only operate as far as the Mud Creek crossing.

With the growing importance of the Edmonton-Saskatoon Creek highway it is felt that a bridge should be built at this point.

Mosher Foresees No Early Strikes

REGINA, (CP)—Canada will not see any major industrial strike for at least the next few months

A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor last Friday.

Wholesale lifting of price controls before production has reacted to the war, however, would bring immediate and general demands for higher wages.

Mr. Mosher said Mr. Mosher, who is to address a convention of the Saskatchewan Congress of Labor here, is urging the government at Ottawa to hang on to price controls.

Mr. Mosher said Canadian railways would represent by 21 unions a major industrial group for which he would estimate a cost of $4700,000, but estimated they would require making demand and a reduced work week, extension of vacation with pay and union security.

Urges Admittance Chinese to Canada

Chinese to Canada
 TORONTO (CP)—Describing the Chinese immigration act as "an insult not only to an Allied nation but to one of the great civilizations of the past," the Toronto District Labor council has called for "total repeal" of the act.
 A resolution asked the federal government to remove restrictions which have barred Chinese families from Canada for thirty years.

Find Miners Dislike Strike But Accept Lewis' Orders

By Peter Inglis
 PITTSBURGH.—The soft coal miners of Pennsylvania are simple-minded, uncompromising men. You get the impression that the majority are not personally fond of John L. Lewis, but Lewis is the boss. If he says they no longer have a contract with coal for the government, then as far as they are concerned there is no contract. If there is no contract, they do not mine coal.

The first official day of the United States' second great post-war coal strike, as the 100,000 miners in the Pittsburgh area were, except for skeleton crews to prevent flooding or other damage.

In the nation's capital, the administration maintains its determination to have things out with Lewis and for all.
 In Pittsburgh and in the mining towns, businessmen as well as union men say "How!"
 The essence of all that the miners tell you could probably be boiled down into this:
 "We didn't particularly want this strike, but our leadership decided it was necessary so nobody is going to force us to go to work. If they put Lewis in jail, that's a point of coal will ever be raised as long as he stays there."

Don't Want Strikes
 As for the businessmen, their feeling seems pretty well summarized in the words of one of the more "solid" types.
 "I think Lewis is going to win and that's something I'm not happy to see. I think a great mistake has been made in judging this issue solely on the basis of the personality of that man."
 I would like to see the government meet them half-way and discuss the matter openly. In any case, if they decide they're not going to work, how is the government going to force them to?

Most Pittsburgh people do not blame the miners, but they appear to believe the miners, and all labor must be given a new sense of respect. For the bulk of that sense, they blame the government. The people believe that Lewis will win the immediate test, but that he will lose the long-run battle. The new Republican congress will be forced next January to start rebuilding the pattern of labor regulations in the United States, forcing responsibilities on unions and making further Lewisian impossible.

Canada May Use German 'Secrets'

OTTAWA, (CP)—Triumphs of German industry and scientific progress are under study in Canada and officials predicted that some may eventually have considerable effect on Canadian methods.
 The study is a reproduction of the visit to Germany last year of a team of some 50 Canadian experts who came home with numerous samples of equipment and pieces of information.
 They range from heavy machine tools to delicate precision instruments, from a combustion chamber for the V1 rocket to a biologic pedal from airplane instruments to a machine that makes better in one continuous process.

At the same time, British, American and Canadian observers have gathered hundreds of reports on German advances and they still are coming into Ottawa from a central post.
 Generally speaking, however, the Canadian news reported on so far, all in all, to take all its lead to the nation that has commonly been considered one of the best, if not the best, in this field.

Generally speaking, too, officials report that Canadian industrial concerns have manifested no great excitement over the prospect of injecting German measures into their own. Response to the availability of reports has not been marked. Nor is there any widespread interest in the equipment.

Chalkin called attention to the road made of pits and water sprays at the coal face has reduced the menace tremendously, he was told.

Coal Strike Brings Dimout; May Pipe Gas in Emergency verting signs and for air conditioning and refrigeration equipment where essential.

 It requires a 25 percent cut in electricity used for street lighting buildings except homes, and for running passenger elevators and escalators. All Christmas lighting displays are off.

The government has from all coal stocks outside the hands of consumers. The Navy also ordered its district commanders to sell any excess coal to essential consumers and give use of spare power generators.

Strategic layoffs were reported in industries dependent on coal for continued operations and industry spokesmen predicted the number of unemployed would swell to millions if the dispute were prolonged.
 However, O. D. T. Director J. Monahan announced a temporary embargo on rail freight traffic which would be in place for several days. Excess coal stocks available to railroads, he said, made immediate action unnecessary.
 "The official steel industry magazine said."

New U.S. Army Equipment Given Gruelling Winter Tests

By John Jenkins
 CAMP MCCURT, N.Y.—They're blasting the "grapes" out of the army on 60,000 first-aid ambulances out of this country's training reservation.
 Never again will the American doughboy freeze a foot for lack of the last long winter test. The army through combat equipment allergic to the cold.

His clothing, food, arms and medicines all are undergoing constant inspection. The army's military project named "Task Force" is to determine how well a row of gunfire for a six months' test.

In those months, through ice, snow and sub-zero field operations, the campaign is aimed at safeguarding the life of the foot soldier.

Find Arctic Methods
 It will develop new far-north techniques to improve guns, vehicles, equipment, eventually saving thousands of lives in the winter.
 It will correct the available combat dangers which took thousands of lives in the pressure of the war and will provide for every foreseeable emergency in northern climates, according to Col. Joseph W. Rowley, Frost's commander.

From knives, forks and spoons to toothbrushes and even from eight-inch life jackets and equipment the army found it was in need of expert investigation.

From down to midnight and in need of expert investigation, the army's every move is being studied and reported to better the attacks of nature.

Find Arctic Methods
 Even a Jeep is bouncing from rugged hills to tank-bashed valleys with a host of mechanical problems making it livable, and with the weather, the army is forming it into a convertible couple.

Fourteen hundred officers and men, representing picked units of armor, artillery and infantry sections centered at Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Benning, Ga.; and Fort Belvoir, Mo., are engaged in the all-out offensive against the cold.

Commented by combat veterans officers of each ground service branch, they are scattered all over the vast training battlefield. They are engaged in against the long winter freeze and living in tents with their weapons and modern equipment, which also must come up to new cold-weather standards to survive.

Three Forces in Action
 Similar to but not yet coordinated with, task forces now operating in the field, the findings of Frost and the other two forces will be studied and correlated by the army ground force board when the missions end in June.

Spectacular action launched the Frost campaign on foot-cold fields which, under normal conditions, would be blanketed with feet of snow at this time of year.

Tanks led the advance shortly after dawn with realistic attacks on three sand roads slashed from the hilly hills by all-important bulldozers.

While specialist detail watched, recorded the action, and while engineers noted the performance of every mechanical part, 20-ton medium tank carrying a new 100-mm. high velocity weapon, rolled up and topped the first 30 percent grade.

Tackle Tough Hills
 An improved M2 medium tank, bearing the 100-mm. high velocity gun which beat the German "Tiger" in the field, topped the top ahead of a giant new high speed artillery piece capable of towing a 240-mm. gun.

Just for the fun of it, a tiny, troop-carrying "Waco" was designed for snow and ice water work, run up the highest hill and fired its tail at its monster brother.

Deep snow and ice will later prove whether the heavier vehicle

Lewis Stores Only Small Coal Supply

ALEXANDRIA, Va., (AP)—If the coal market continues, John L. Lewis men get cold, too. He probably has less than a month's supply of coal at his disposal.

This opinion comes from Ches. Fanning, the man who sells Mr. Lewis' coal.

The mine workers' chief has some fuel insurance, however. There's a woodpile in his backyard.

He can be employed in ground like this and what modification they need under winter conditions, as well.

Test New Clothing
 In quick succession, then, the army revealed for the first time since the war ended its many improvements in field tents and sheltering packings and sleds, and the new winter clothing which allows a man to keep temperatures in the open ranging from moderate to 40 below through use of new light-weight, weather-resistant fabrics.

New field kitchens dished up hot food in field kitchens. The new knife-fork-spoon combination appeared in the field. The eating implements slide together easily after use, eliminating the old O.I. habit of tossing away separate knife and fork, and saving the spoon in his boot top.

Think, knife-fork and new field piece firms, demonstration of the new system of heating and improved equipment in hospital and first-aid field tents; new radar and radio gun-aiming devices and the firing of a concentrated night attack problem completed the initial demonstration.

We Hope He's Right

Premier Manning has rejected the Dominion Government offer to the provinces for individual temporary taxation agreements for a period of the year.

Premier Duplessis of Quebec and Premier Dwyer of Ontario have taken a similar stand, while British Columbia has yet to make its position known.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and New Brunswick have accepted the terms for the five year period and appear to be satisfied with the arrangement under the present circumstances and for the time being.

But no agreement offered by the Dominion Government could possibly satisfy the greed and political hatred of Messrs. Duplessis and Dwyer.

Thinking people realize that Toronto and Montreal represent only the cash registers of the financially powerful insurance and transportation revenues of the country—revenues drawn from every part of Canada and by no stretch of the imagination capable of being taxed as revenues for exploitation by the provincial governments of Ontario and Quebec.

British Columbia is in a twofold position of these two provinces and the other provinces because of its huge industrial development and its mineral and forest resources.

The other provinces, particularly the prairie provinces, have been milked of their just revenues because of the purely accidental fact that the headquarters of most of our Canadian corporations are centred in Montreal and Toronto.

In the opinion of The Edmonton Bulletin, Premier Manning has nothing to gain and much to lose by being associated with such political tricksters as Messrs. Dwyer and Duplessis.

However, the people of Alberta, facing the serious probability of the imposition of double taxation in this province, can only hope against their conviction and fears that Premier Manning may be right.

Now's The Time to Act

The one immediate reaction in Canada to the shut-down of the Pennsylvania and United States was the announcement of an official directive which puts industrial users in Ontario and Quebec on a day-to-day ration if they have not already accepted this directive indicates two things; that industries in those provinces are threatened with widespread paralysis; and that the fuel control officers are already aware of the fact. The rationing order speaks for itself on both points.

That this danger is grave is shown by the news from Washington. Evidently there is to be a battle in the courts between the legal department of the Government and the lawyers for Mr. Roosevelt's executive order to start either on Monday or, more probably, on Wednesday. When it will end nobody knows. And meanwhile the miners say they will not go back to work.

From Wilkes-Barre comes a despatch also bearing on the situation. Thousands of hard coal miners in Pennsylvania have stayed away from work Thursday, either because they were "confused" or in sympathy with the soft coal miners. That is the area from which Ontario and Quebec draw huge supplies of anthracite for heating homes and public buildings.

Both industries and house-holders in central Canada are watching the coal bins, measuring the reserves in the fuel yards, and wondering whether they will have anything to burn a couple of weeks from now.

The directive is a prudent measure aimed to eke out existing supplies of soft coal. It will certainly be followed by an order rationing hard coal also if the anthracite miners in Pennsylvania stay out. That may have to be done anyway, as scarcity of soft coal sharpens the demand for hard coal from United States consumers.

Such conserving measures are obviously necessary if Canada is to continue to eke out supplies already exhausted. They can do nothing to increase the fuel reserves, nor to keep these at the present level. What is needed to take the part of the country in this situation is a heavy increase in coal shipments from Alberta and Nova Scotia.

Considering the gravity of the outlook, it is to be hoped the fuel control branch is also taking steps to speed up the movement from these areas to Ontario and Quebec. These steps should include the use of the very possible occurrence of a fuel famine there. This forestall the possibility of control officials can avert the threatened paralysis of industry in those provinces and the danger that hospitals and homes will find themselves without fuel shortly. But the time to act is now.

Edmonton Art Club

Next Tuesday, November 26, the Edmonton Art Club will hold the formal opening of its annual Christmas exhibition in the Museum of Art at 8 p.m. when it will be host to the members of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce.

Thereafter, for two full weeks, the exhibition will be open to the public.

This annual Christmas exhibition has come to be a delightful fixture in Edmonton's seasonal life. It has an added significance this year because the occasion marks the 25th anniversary of the Edmonton Art Club's foundation.

In that quarter of a century, the club has established a reputation as a useful factor in the cultural life of the community. It has provided a fellowship for the talented. It has developed latent artistic talent. But, most important of all, it has enriched the lives of literally thousands not only by the creation of beauty but also through providing an outlet for that self-expression which seems to be one of the fundamental requirements of man.

The many artistic and cultural groups of Edmonton are broadening the life of this community in a manner and to an extent that their founders never dreamed.

The full results may not be apparent for a generation—but they will be apparent, sooner or later, in a great better way when the very quality of Edmonton's citizenship and community life will show the marks of their influence.

The people of Edmonton will wish to congratulate very warmly the Edmonton Art Club upon attaining an important milestone in a career of usefulness.

Christian Endurance

In an age of international uncertainty and disconcerting social change, one of the first qualifications for tranquil and hopeful living is a capacity for perseverance and endurance.

In such a time the minds of the devout turn inevitably to the message delivered by the prophet Isaiah to an oppressed and discouraged people:

"They that wait on the Lord shall not be weary in time; they shall not slumber in sleep, for they shall not be weary, they shall walk and not faint."

This miraculous endurance conferred upon the faithful is not a figment of prophetic imagination. It is a very real and concrete thing.

The Christian martyrs had it, bearing their sufferings with a fortitude incapable to their pagan tormentors. The saints down through all the ages have possessed this mystical gift of 1946 as it was to the victim of the Roman arena.

And it is just as available today to those who have faith as it was in the early days of the Christian era. It is just as accessible to the weary citizen of 1946 as it was to the victim of the Roman arena.

The statement of the prophet is not a figment of speech. It is literal truth. For there is no difference between the difficult and the impossible except that the impossible takes more time. With an omnipotent God waiting, a glorious, glorious, defeat is only for those who accept it.

The great truth is that in a mighty purpose is a power by which men and women can triumph in the most difficult of purposes which has in it faith, perseverance and endurance.

Purpose holds the earnest man in its orbit. Purpose is the magnetized needle of the soul which makes it point to one star. In the midst of a dark purpose lies the secret of overcoming life.

The Road Ahead

By Harper Prowse, M.L.A.

It would be a mistake if the majority of Canadians were to follow the "Squid" movement which has received so much publicity merely as the workings of a political agitator. Although some of the ring-leaders may be, as has been alleged, persons of no account, a great many of the people who have taken part in these operations are sincere and honest citizens who should not be looked at with suspicion by every fair-minded person.

It has been stated that the authorities have always had a good reputation for respecting the law. We cannot see how it is possible, then, that most of these people must have been, or felt themselves to be, in violation of the law. We may be able to blame their acts. The agitators, but certainly we cannot blame the agitators for the condition of which they took advantage.

The second thing we must consider is the fact that as soon as the agitators have been taken into custody, the authorities have not used the force to their own advantage. They have in practically every instance proceeded to make them as comfortable as possible. This in itself breeds disrespect for law and encourages lawlessness.

From this we must deduce that the authorities have failed to take the steps themselves, which were eventually taken by the agitators. It would be better if the authorities should take steps to make sure that the agitators should not be able to take them out of the country. Today people are being taken out of the country and they are not interested in speeches about democracy. They are going to follow those who look after their interests.

The net result of all this is that there are a great many people who are not getting help from the authorities who are not getting the attention of the agitators. It will be normal if these people continue to look to them out for leadership and advice. If we don't like this, the people to blame are the agitators who have taken them out of the country.

The recommendation in the Rowell-Sirois report was for a constitutional amendment to provide for concurrent provincial and federal jurisdiction over labour legislation under which the federal government would set minimum standards of wages and working conditions while leaving collective bargaining and the making of local standards to any province.

Poinsettia With Their Confetti Doesn't Worry Brides As Seasonal Bell Rings for Weddings as Well as Noel

Children don't usually like Christmas birthdays. But brides aren't that childish.

Poinsettia with their confetti is apparently all right with Edmonton brides-to-be, for there is no noticeable slackening of weddings here during the festive season.

For the 'Christmas birthday' children there is no anniversary choice, whereas brides have the whole year to choose from. Yet despite this freedom 'to set the date,' bridal outfitters in the city say that Christmas trade in wedding outfits stays about normal. It's a case of the bride deciding that Noel will go well with any bell, Christmas or wedding.

"We have more orders at present for wedding gowns," they say, "than we can handle. For although our peak demand comes from June to September and in February and March, we cater to brides-to-be every day of the year. And the Christmas season is no exception."

Heavy satins, particularly broadcloth satins, are a year-round favorite, they say, and particularly suitable during the winter season. Runners-up are moires, taffetas and velvets.

It is the material, rather than the style, that rules the price ticket on the gown.

Least expensive are the light materials, such as the sheers, which run from $19.95 to $35. A good taffeta costs from $60 and up and broadcloth satins range from $65 to $85. Velvets are in a higher price range and cost $100 or more.

Navy Joins Fight Against Lewis

WASHINGTON, (AP).—The navy lined up with other government agencies Friday in the administration's battle with John L. Lewis.

In an order designed to help cope with the shutdown of soft coal production, the navy instructed all district commanders to:

1. Lead mine surveying to communities where necessary to maintain essential public services.
2. Sell excess navy coal and money where it is "absolutely essential to safeguard health and safety of the local community."

Propose Minister For British Zone

By Frank Swanson

LONDON.—Growing public and parliamentary concern over the red-tape-bound administration of the British zone of Germany may lead to appointment of a full-fledged cabinet minister to control the zone.

Although it is unlikely any changes will be made until after conclusion of negotiations in the United States on economic union of the British and American zones, it was known Friday the government was considering such a possibility.

A storm of criticism of the control commission for Germany and Austria headed by mild-mannered John Hynd, built up slowly, and was kindled when the public heard last week it would be asked to spend $200,000,000 annually on upkeep of the British zone.

There have been increasingly frequent complaints regarding the red tape which swallows operations of the British administration, by observers and newspapermen and members of parliament who have visited the zone.

The proposal for a resident minister was suggested in parliament by members from both sides, all unhappy with the way things appeared in the British zone. This is certainly one of the possibilities the government is examining.

What most critics of Chancellor's administration have overlooked is the fact he has no omnipotent control over Germany. He is subordinate to the foreign office on policy, has no army and must seek prior approval from the government for everything he does. He operates by remote control from London, 800 miles from Berlin in which the combined Allied administration is centered, and is completely divorced from the situation in Germany.

Say Clergy Helped Polish Art Plot

LONDON, (CP).—Pacifist figures, official publication of the Polish government's London embassy, has implicated a report that some members of the Canadian clergy are "implicated in a conspiracy to keep Polish art treasures in Canada."

The latest edition of the weekly publication also questioned "the possibility of millions of pounds worth of such treasures disappearing in this year of 1946 without active co-operation."

The article claimed the Potsdam agreement afforded the Warsaw government "the unequal right" to recover artifacts stored in Canada. "All indications point to a conspiracy reaching from London to Canada with leading persons of the former London 'Polish government' at its head. A regrettable feature is the active co-operation of some members of the Canadian clergy in this affair," the publication said.

Agreement Near On Pool Taxation

By Richard Sabarn

OTTAWA.—The federal government and the provinces are very close to a settlement of the taxation position of the co-operatives, and an amendment of the terms may come in a few days.

Negotiations with the pools have been going on for several months, ever since Finance Minister Islay's budget. The government's new policy on taxation of co-operatives.

The latest proposal was that the pools would not be liable for tax for the fiscal years ending before 1947. For the fiscal years ending in 1947 and 1948, the pools would be allowed to deduct from taxable income the amounts they had paid out in cash patronage dividends, refunds or excess charges and so on. This latter concession would not apply to 1944 and 1945, because the pools were aware before 1944 the department of justice had given the opinion the pools were taxable.

The pools have made counter-proposals, and the settlement now is believed to be a compromise.

An official of the finance department said Friday although the settlement had virtually been effected, no official acceptance had yet taken place on either side.

Economic Life in Europe Broken Down Says Worker

"In Europe, economic life is broken down, families are separated, men are homeless, which is to live, no skill with which to earn a living. It is a wonder that they are wandering the streets," Mrs. Harold Lorie of Toronto, president of the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, said in an interview with The Edmonton Bulletin Saturday at the Macdonald hotel.

She is here to launch her organization's program for the rehabilitation of European women.

During her two-day stay, Mrs. Lorie will address members of Edmonton's section of the council, describing the council's expanded overseas service program.

"The PLAN for the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, working in close conjunction with the National Council of Jewish Women in the United States is to establish a comprehensive program for the rehabilitation of Jewish women in Europe. In these countries, their lives are in danger, and they are in need of food, clothing and shelter. Vocational planning and training for the future are also being considered. Today's Message

CHRISTIANITY AND PROGRESS

Christianity and social progress go hand in hand. The brightest pages of history belong to saintly men and women in all corners of the world who combined pity toward God with a desire to serve their fellow men. Some are famous figures; most are most of them are unknown—simple, God-fearing souls who helped to preserve the glory and promise of Christianity even in periods of darkest misery and despair.
Every age has its social problems; but it has also its anonymous saints, who help to keep the conscience of Christendom alive to its responsibilities. It is from these lovers of God we receive a challenge today to become active participants in the cause of Christian progress rather than mere passive spectators.
The past, Shakespeare said, is only a prelude. We know that Christianity can never be indifferent towards suffering and want. We know that while social injustice remains, while men are denied rights which are theirs by divine ordination, there will be no dearth of Christian believers who will take up the burden of reform. But we must act ourselves individually: "What part I am prepared to play?"
History tells us of devoted souls who helped to wipe out the blight of medieval bigotry and barbarity, to abolish slavery; to rescue the working man from degradation and exploitation; to protect the destitute and orphaned; to aid the physically and mentally afflicted; to extend justice among all races and creeds. Some are famous figures; most are most of them are unknown—simple, God-fearing souls who helped to preserve the glory and promise of Christianity even in periods of darkest misery and despair.

In our own day Christian leaders are calling for crusaders to end the social ills that persist in many countries; to alleviate the disease and hunger that threaten countless numbers; and to implant a new order of good will and social justice among all races and creeds. Some are famous figures; most are most of them are unknown—simple, God-fearing souls who helped to preserve the glory and promise of Christianity even in periods of darkest misery and despair.

Elizabeth Woodward Says . . .

Dear Miss Woodward: "I'm eight, and I've fallen in love with one of the girls where I am employed. I don't even know the girl's name. How can I approach her in order to impress her that I like her?"

What a Darling!

Since this girl you like works at the same place you do, it ought to be no hard to meet her. Keep an eye on her, watch to see whom she knows and with whom she eats lunch, and if any of her friends are friends of yours, you are all set. Get one of them to introduce you. Then be your most pleasant self. Speak to her whenever you can, chat with her during lunch hour, then ask her for a date. See her outside of the office. If she is interested in making fun of you, make it easy for you to see her often. If you see her often, she'll gather that it's because you want to, you don't have to tell her in so many words.

Dear Miss Woodward: "My mother thinks I'm just a silly adolescent. She tries to tell me things and all the time she seems to be making fun of me. She thinks my friends are silly, too, and that really makes me mad. Of course, she doesn't know how to tell me that. What do you think I can do about this? I just can't drop all my friends completely."

I don't really think your mother is making fun of you and your friends. I think her sense of humor prevents her from taking you seriously. Some of your friends' chatter is pretty silly, but to your mother it isn't important, but to your mother it doesn't make much sense. You shouldn't blame her too much for that. She's old enough and detached enough to think you and your friends are amusing. When you get just a bit older and think back you'll realize you were amusing. But don't drop your friends because of your mother's attitude. She doesn't disappoint, even though she does smile.

Dear Miss Woodward: "I'm nineteen, but I don't look or act it. I've been going with a boy two years younger than I am for three years."

You ought to settle up. It's easy to coast along with it. You ought to get out with people of your own age, you ought to broaden your horizon, you ought to back up against some real competition. You can't live your High School days forever, there are new worlds for you to conquer!

Dorothy Dix Says —

Inasmuch as all life is a series of compromises, it is not strange that we have not been allowed enough to introduce the bargaining bluff into marriage! Of course, you may say that divorce is nothing but horse trading, and that the divorcee and her husband or wife for a new one, it is in the hope that we will get one nearer to our heart's desire.

BUT THE CATCH in this is that while our nudes may have faulted our fathers, that get on our nerves, taken as a whole we are fond of the divorcee and her husband or wife for a new one, it is in the hope that we will get one nearer to our heart's desire.

Then the question arises, what to do about it? The good sports like it. The quitters renge on it. But the majority start on a 30 or 40 day civil war. Yet there is an easy way out. If they would only take it, it is by compromise. By exchanging their pet peeves.

SO SUPPOSE, for instance, instead of a husband and wife being in a perpetual fight over his claiming to be too weary to take her exercise in an evening, he would say "All right, I'll make you a fair offer. I will, by compromise, by exchanging their pet peeves."

Or a husband might offer to trade with a wife a car, coat, or a trip, for a year's sacrifice from nagging. Or even agree just to commiserate on her hair if she will let him pick out his own neckties.

And her part, the wife might consent to do with fewer expensive gowns and hats in exchange for more personal attention, and kisses and don't feel as if they have come out of the frigidity. Or she might agree to refrain from trying to make him over if he would take her as she was. And goodness knows what she wouldn't do for a husband and not at all the time of her life.

Perhaps the secret of how to make a marriage last is to make it being a sharp trade. Try it.

Everything's Dandy!

Why Grow Old?

For real vitality and beauty girls like Actress Peggy Knudsen, above, need exercise and golf is a good way to obtain that exercise. But don't overdo it.

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Probably more people play golf than any other game. This is natural because it is adaptable to individuals of greatly varying ages. There have been champions as young as sixteen and as old as sixty.

MANY PEOPLE think of golf as somewhat recent game but its background extends far back into history. During the early Christian era the Romans played a similar game. The French also had a like game called jeu de Mail. The Dutch played a game which required a stick and ball. They called their ball a mallet. In all of these games the object was to hit an upright stick with the ball. It took the player to make holes in the ground to receive the ball. In fact, the Scotch fell in love with the game that their parliament, fearing that it would become unpopular than their loyal order prohibited it by law for a long time. In the United States a rule of crude form of golf was instituted as early as 1630.

So we see the popularity of the game of golf has pulled it through several crises to its present refined form. It is really a grand game and even more people should begin it. It gets one in the open requires much walking and is a swing of the club is not strenuous for middle-aged and older persons. Yes the game requires skill and provides competition, which makes it interesting to the youth.

NEVERTHELESS, golf leads to a great deal of abuse so far as health is concerned. The very fact that it seems so mild to some people to play longer than they should. The number of holes played should definitely be related to the age and physical capacity of the individual, as well as the day.

Sweden's oldest tree is a 2,000-year-old oak at Runkila. It is a surprising extensive survey to physical capacity of the individual, as well as the day.

Millions Slated for Airfields In Alaska Defence Projects

By Frank Angelo
PATTENBERG, Alaska, (CND)—America is building up its defenses in Alaska.

Where an expansion program now under way is completed, thousands of men and about $100,000,000 will have been poured into the territory to provide air fields with runways ranging up to 10,000 feet in length. Much of this money will be expended on the outside of this boundaried town.

Expert 2000 Viewers
The work here already has started. The first field and a so-called satellite field about 20 miles away. New super-veneries and housing facilities for service personnel and their families are major items on the building program.

More than 600 civilians, most of them construction workers from the U.S., are busy here and the number is expected to swell to 2,000 by mid-summer.

This is part of a contract that also covers expansion of Richardson field outside Anchorage, development of further facilities at Nome on the western tip of Alaska and in the Aleutian Island chain.

[The work is expected to take about 18 months to complete.

Mostly Air Defence
All this activity emphasizes one factor about any future defense of Alaska. It will, because of the terrain and lack of land, be almost entirely an aerial affair.

As for as transportation is concerned, for example, there are three conventional, but highly vulnerable, routes leading into the interior of Alaska: one via the Alaskan highway, one by rail from the port of Seward and rail road from Anchorage, and one by road from Fairbanks.

Even so small a group as the Force brigade, which is making roadways from Fairbanks, is actually up on the Alaska transportation system when it came up from California by boat and rail in mid-September. It took almost a week to complete the 300-mile movement of 1,500 men and some 500 vehicles from Seward.

Boats Civilian Flying
The importance of aerial thinking for the army is doubly stressed by civilian activity here. Per capita, Alaskans are the most airplane-people in the world. They have to be, to move very far and very often.

This army's program undoubtedly will serve to boost civilian air transport even more. A spacious, well-equipped passenger terminal has been built at Seward and it is being shared by army and civilian air travelers now. It is expected to be turned over entirely to civilian use at an early date.

Maritime Mariners Ask Pay Increase

OLACE BAY, N.S., (CPI)—Negotiations between district 20, United Mine Workers of America, and officials of the major coal companies in the Maritime provinces to a new contract will be opened here today, it was announced by Adam Scott, union district secretary.

The current wage agreement for 13,000 miners in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island expires Jan. 31, 1943.

The union is demanding an average of 25-cent-a-day increase, a 40-hour week, a 15-cent-a-ton royalty for a pension plan, the closed shop and union security.

End War Services May Ask West Ship Coal East

By John Bird
OTTAWA, (CND)—Last year Canada imported 37½ per cent of its bituminous coal requirements from the United States, 23,000,000 tons, against a home production of 17,000,000 tons.

This is the cold fact that faces Canadians in the American bituminous strike. For the short haul, Canadian supplies are adequate because the industry "lets have no more" attitude of Ottawa officials. But if the American strike should be long drawn out, it will be an entirely different story.

Householders will not be directly hit by the American bituminous strike, unless it spreads to the oil fields.

If the strike is prolonged, it may be that western Canadian coal producers will be called upon to ship coal east for utilities such as gas companies. Furthermore, B.C. may be called upon to help out in the state of Washington, which has been ready to help out when American shortages have arisen, but no great movement of Canadian coal southward is anticipated since it is not practical to ship Canadian coal deep into the U.S.

A long tie-up would curtail Canadian coal exports to the U.S. and the U.S. would curtail Canadian coal exports to the U.S.

Landlord Is Jailed For Bottle Barrage

TOURON, N.S. (AP)—Landlord Frank P. Hendall drew a 60-day jail sentence after his tenants testified he drove them out of a second-story window with a bottle barrage.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mac Mahle, tenants for six years, told the court Hendall asked them to move from their apartment over his and threatened to evict them. They refused to move.

They were awakened one night by bottles shattering against their bedroom door.

"There was crashing glass everywhere," Mrs. Mahle testified. "We were scared out of our wits. I fastened two sheets together and hung them from the bathroom window. My husband, who is partly blind, went down safely. I got scared and fell."

Mrs. Mahle testified she was in the hospital 13 weeks. Hendall said he wasn't trying to scare anybody—he was obliged to the tenants leaving a lot of bottles in the hallway.

THE DUNCE'S LETTER

NOT long ago the Dunce became interested in a little girl who lives in one of the big houses near the Teenie Weenie village. By holding a maple leaf in front of his tiny body, he could get rather close to the little girl without being seen. The little girl had a kitten which she dressed up in her doll's clothes, and that tickled the Dunce.

One day while the family was away the Dunce thought it would be fun to visit the little girl's house. He asked several of the Teenie Weenie men to go along and they soon made their way into the house. The kitten was at home, but it was fast asleep and the little men did not disturb it. They examined everything in the house with much interest and then they climbed up onto a desk that stood in the little girl's room. There were several books, a couple of lead pencils, a bottle of ink, a box, a rule and some pieces of writing paper on the desk.

At first, the little men had lots of fun lying on the rule and measuring themselves. To the Dunce's great delight, he was the tallest Teenie Weenie, measuring 2 1/16 inches—just 1/32 of an inch taller than the Turk.

"I'm going to write a letter," announced the Dunce, picking up one of the pencils. "I know the little girl well enough to write to her."

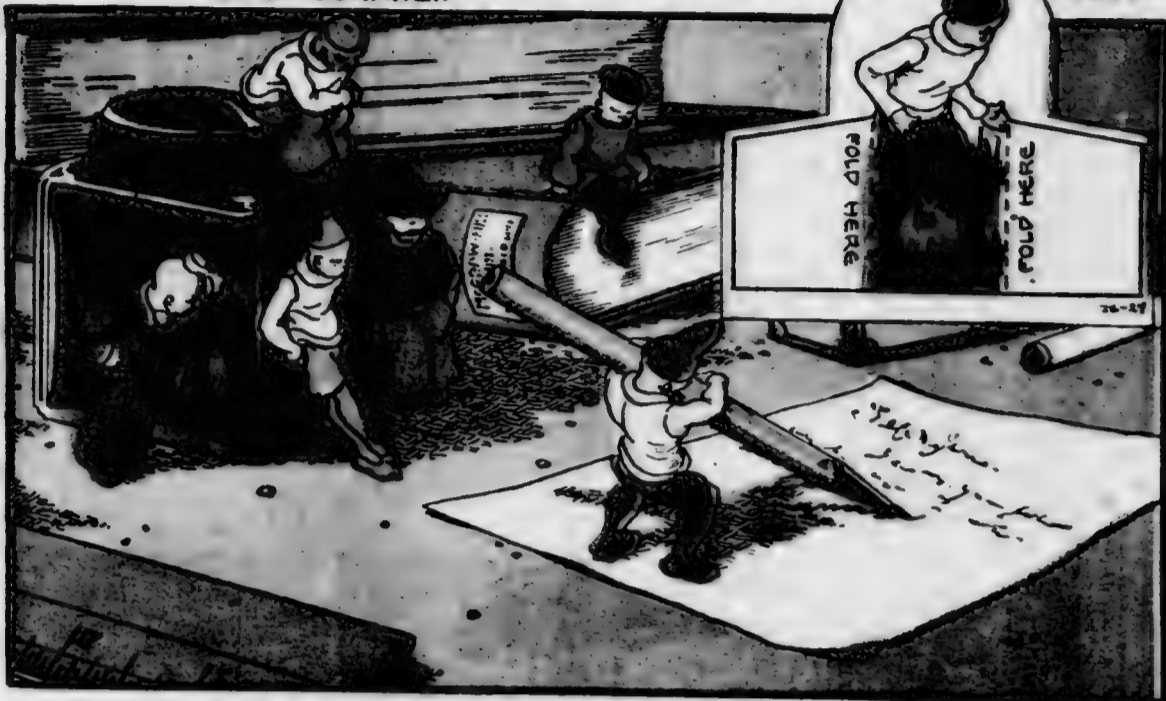

"But she doesn't know you," the Turk objected. "Maybe she doesn't even know Teenie Weenies live here."

"She'll soon know," the Dunce promised.

The other Teenie Weenies gathered around and looked on while the Dunce struggled with the heavy pencil. The pencil was so big it was about all the Dunce could do to move it along the paper, but finally he managed to pencil out a rather scrawly note.

"I'll bet that little girl will be surprised when she finds this letter," said the Dunce, wiping his sweaty forehead with his sleeve.

When the little girl found the letter on her desk that evening, she was properly surprised. But she had a hard time reading it, for the writing was very bad and the spelling was even worse. After a great deal of puzzling, this is what she read:

Dear June—

I have been watching you play with your kitten. I like it when you dress the kitten up in your doll's dresses. When I watch you I camouflage myself in a maple leaf so you won't see me. Camouflage means disguises yourself so you will not be seen.

Yours truly,

The Teenie Weenie Dunce
